

Politics endeavours to change society for the better. The process is largely unsuccessful because the individual remains unconscious. Authentic religion, the way of the mystic, starts with the individual and brings light to his unconsciousness. In the past the mystic would work on his growth in consciousness by focusing on his inner world and withdrawing from unconscious society. The New Dawn calls for integration of society and spiritual development. This can happen through the marriage of Buddha and Zorba. Zorba the Buddha is the new man. Zorba is passion for life and all its worldly pleasures. Buddha is awareness. By allowing Zorba to play and create, Buddha is built on solid ground. When the time for introversion comes Zorba has drunk the last drop of wine. There is no conflict of interest. Society is a total of its parts. Politics is doomed to continue failing until each individual becomes more conscious.

FOUR WORDS THY WILL BE DONE ARE ENOUGH.

If you live them totally. The implications are immense. God is managing every detail of everything. The human effort for positive change creates the illusion of free will. Our effort seems to make a difference. Our effort and creativity are pre-programmed by God. He gives us the appearance of choice. Our choice is pre-programmed by God. We are destined to act, think and feel according to God's will. He is the creator of our ego, the sense of separation from life. He is the creator of our arrogance. And the creator of our reunion. He is the creator of our awakening. Thy Will Be Done is the recognition of how things are. This understanding if lived totally brings freedom from the hell of the ego. This understanding is not static. It is fully dynamic. One plays one's part in the drama of life with gusto. Always remembering that God is the director, producer, scriptwriter, set and costume designer and all the actors. These four words are enough. Thy Will Be Done.
